QUOTEABLE QUOTES ...

GIDAMOS SHIHANGA, winner, 10,000-meter run in meet record 28:31.26:

"I was not concerned when (Ed) Byestone opened up a little space at the end because I thought there were two more laps. It kind of started me to hear the bell."

"I was not concerned about the time. I just wanted to win."

"Yes, I plan to run in the 5,000 tomorrow." (Note: Shihanga won both the 10,000 and 5,000 in last year's WAC championships).

"I did not think it was hot enough for the heat to be a factor today. I would say it was in the 60s. If the temperature had been in the high 70s or 80s, it might have been a factor."

"On this track, though, we might have run 27 (under 28:00) if the weather had been a little cooler or if the race was run later in the day. It's a fast track."

"I have not decided whether to run the 10,000 or the marathon in the Olympics. I might enter both, and make up my mind later. Actually, my trainer will tell me what to do."

NOTE: Shihanga is the defending NCAA champion in both the 10,000 and 5,000.

JAY NOVACEK, winner, decathlon:

"Obviously, it's disappointing not to qualify for the Olympic Trials, especially since I came so close, but you can't be too upset when you've just won your conference championship."

"I knew I might be in trouble (in terms of qualifying for the Trials) when I went 15.56 in the highs this morning. My best is 14.6. That's not the best way to start out your day."

(On why he moved the pole vault bar from 16-1 to 16-10, despite the fact his career best is 16-4): "I knew I'd fallen behind the pace I'd need to get to the trials, and I felt I had a better chance to make them up in the vault than in the javelin."

"The Olympic Trials are the most important thing in my life right now. I'll probably enter a decathlon every week now until I make it -- or don't make it. I think I've got a pretty good shot. This is only my fourth decathlon. I'm improving in almost every event every week."
